The Salesforce Automation Trap

Dynamic DOM & iFrames

Salesforce's constantly shifting DOM structure and nested iFrames break traditional locator strategies — causing flaky, unreliable test suites.

Maintenance Overhead

Fragile locators and brittle scripts consume up to 40% of QA team bandwidth — time spent fixing tests instead of finding bugs.

Automation Fatigue

The compounding cost of delayed releases and low ROI erodes trust in automation, leading teams back to inefficient manual testing cycles.

Enter the New Standard: Java + Playwright

1 Speed & Context Management

Playwright delivers faster execution with native multi-browser context support — no more driver setup headaches.

2 Enterprise-Grade Java Design

Java's object-oriented architecture enables robust, scalable frameworks trusted across the enterprise ecosystem.

3 Seamless UI + API Bridge

Bridge patterns unify UI interactions with direct API calls, enabling truly data-independent, resilient tests.

The AI Upgrade

Three breakthroughs that fundamentally change what automation can do.

Self-Healing Locators

AI-powered selectors automatically adapt when Salesforce updates its UI — dramatically reducing script breakage and maintenance cycles.

Generative Script Creation

Natural language instructions are translated into test actions by LLMs, slashing script creation time for complex Salesforce workflows.

LLM-Assisted Debugging

Cryptic stack traces become clear, actionable insights — AI interprets failure context and recommends precise fixes instantly.

Simba Framework Architecture

Built for Salesforce Complexity

The Simba Framework is engineered around three core principles:

→ Clean Code Architecture

Modular, readable, and scalable — designed for long-term maintainability across large QA teams.

→ Decoupled Page Object Model

→ Intelligent Synchronization

Dynamic wait strategies handle Salesforce's unpredictable load times — no more brittle `sleep()` commands.

Beyond UI: The Full Lifecycle

API Integration

Bypass slow UI setup by using REST APIs to seed and teardown test data in seconds — accelerating every test run.

Cross-Validation

Assert UI states directly against backend SOQL and SQL queries — ensuring data integrity across every layer of Salesforce.

Accessibility Auditing

Axe-Core is injected automatically into test runs, delivering continuous WCAG compliance checks without extra manual effort.
